History of the Mercury Lounge

The Mercury Lounge opened in 1993. In 2000, a band called The Strokes went global after a month-long weekly residency. Yeah Yeah Yeahs frequently opened at these shows. Mercury Lounge became an NYC rock epicenter for touring artists. In 2017, Mercury Lounge formed a partnership with Live Nation, and most events became platformed through Ticketmaster.

Top Ten Reasons Planning a Big Show Makes People Sick

1. Nobody responds to messages -> anxiety.
2. All-nighters on edits and posts that don't go viral
3. Tracking ticket count makes people nauseous
4. Realizing typos in email outreach to major labels
5. People rip down flyers a night after they're hung
6. Bandmates have busy schedules for rehearsing
7. High tension creates drama easily
8. Promoting relentlessly is exhausting
9. Assuming the worst after a month of planning
10. People forget to just chill and have a little faith

And it all works out!

ICYMI: This is The Baker Pyramid

We're a restaurant menu of music, New York City bands, nostalgia, and satire, as opposed to law and insurance ads. Find us at your local indie coffee shop, rock venue, and vintage store. Read, enjoy, and save for use as a coffee table rolling tray. Recyclable - if you can find a place to do so in Manhattan.
